Ensuring that we extend outdoor living spaces year round, beautifully, Kayu Canada brings to the fire table the warmth and richness of tropical hardwoods. Changing the face of home for the past twenty years, they offer a premium selection of Brazilian Walnut or Ipe, Yellow Balau, and Red Balau Batu wood species. Featuring a host of benefits, given their density and subsequent durability, they represent quality options for decks, fences, soffits, cladding, and pergolas.

“These wood species are valued for their quality exterior applications because of their natural oils and density, which makes it long-lasting and resistant to rot,” shares owner Jim Labelle of his products that are weather appropriate for our Canadian climate.

With overhead heaters and wood burning and gas fireplaces, the outdoor living area has evolved into an exciting extension of our homes with function that has even crossed the borders of home theatre. “Your outdoor space can become the ideal place for entertaining or just watching the game or a movie with the family,” says Jim.

“Our customers use this product to accommodate a variety of exterior experiences, including kitchens, as it exhibits a seamless aesthetic that can look as good twenty years from now,” admits Jim Labelle. Imported from Malaysia, Indonesia, Peru, and Brazil, Kayu Canada’s products are comparably priced with composite decking and cedar, yet strongly resembles Brazilian cherry with its rich tones and knot-free appearance.

With their show room located at Bay #8, 6304 Burbank Road SE in Calgary, Kayu Canada satisfies the demands of builders, suppliers, landscapers, architects, and innovative DIY’s. “There is nothing available that compares to it,” states Labelle, adding that its origins bring a beauty and lustre that only tropical hardwoods share. “What makes it a real winner is its internal and external applications that afford a rich and stylish continuity that can be carried throughout the home.”

“Come see for yourself the beauty and design options of Kayu Canada in the warmth of Southcentre Mall at the Ultimate Renovations display,” shares Jim Labelle.

Now is the time to consider extending your outdoor outlook with the warm and luxurious look and feel of Kayu Canada tropical hardwoods.
